Dear Andrew Bloom:

Based on my expectation when I hire a contractor, I rarely write letters of recommendation, I require work to be performed as outlined by contractual agreements and expect nothing less. This being said however, when a job is performed beyond these expectations I feel it is necessary to pass along my gratitude to a job well done and pass it along to those involved and those whom may consider using your services in the future.

After retrofitting over a thousand fixtures, motion devices and thousands of bulbs, our workflow was never impeded. All contracted personnel were very professional, orderly and readily adapted to changes that occurred during the installation that our company did not originally consider upon agreement to the contract.

Our rebate with the CL&P was greater than what was proposed and our monthly savings were right on target of what was estimated.

If warranted, please pass my name and number to any potential customers and I will readily discuss in detail why this letter was submitted on behalf of your company.

Respectfully yours,
